

PHOTOS BY ERIKA SCHULTZ / THE SEATTLE TIMES

Prayers at end of Ramadan

Top: A small child looks around during Eid al-Fitr prayers outside the Tukwila Community Center Tuesday in Tukwila. Eid al-Fitr is a three-day holiday that marks the end of Ramadan, the Islamic holy month of fasting.

Right: Hundreds of Muslims talk before Eid al-Fitr prayers at the Tukwila Community Center. After the event, hosted by the Abu-Bakr Islamic Center of Washington, many families celebrated with their loved ones.

happening. It's much more likely the end will come shuffling than soaring. You'll die driving to work, say. Or lying in some hospice ward. If you're lucky you might pass while you're sleeping.

Dan Dodds surely wasn't thinking about final moments when he decided to get up early most mornings this summer to go fishing. He was only 62, and in good health. Semiretired, he wanted to put some serious hours into a lifelong passion.

Dan Dodds

"He loved fishing because it was just him and the fish," says his brother, Mike Dodds, of Bel-ingham. "Matching wits with the fish, then usually losing — he loved that."

So Dodds was believed to be in a fine mood already when he showed up to fish the beach at Keystone Spit, on Whidbey Island, one recent morning. Even though he had been "skunked" all season — hadn't caught a fish worth mentioning.

He was there Aug. 18 trying for the big run of pink salmon, a fish that typically weighs 3 to 5 pounds. Onlookers later told the

See > WESTNEAT, B2

MAN GUILTY, MISTRIAL FOR ANOTHER IN SLAYING

BY SARA JEAN GREEN
Seattle Times staff reporter

Though Bryce Huber didn't fire a single shot, a King County